Fiscal Impact of proposed City Charter Amendments concerning Elections

The amendments to Sections 3.02(a) and 3.02(c) could have a significant fiscal impact by requiring more special elections to fill vacancies in the office of city commissioner. Each such special election would be a district election (as opposed to a citywide election) and would cost approximately $177,000. While the number of additional special elections is impossible to determine, past history indicates that the number could be in the neighborhood of one every ten years.
